Testing Tips

By Britney Girard

Spring. Along with warm weather and longer days...comes testing. Testing can be quite a stressful time, but that doesn't have to be the case.

First let's take a look at it this way: life wise, these big things come and go, so we need to breathe and not make it worse on ourselves. Make it easier for yourself! A goal could be just to get a passing grade on the test.

There are several things we can do to help ourselves during testing. Make yourself a study guide, even if your teachers give you one. Having a study guide that is set in your own layout and to your own liking can make you possibly want to study it. After simplifying the material for yourself specifically and all the work you did on the study guide, don't make it go to waste. Another important thing is sleep. Get a good night's worth of sleep. Your stomach may already be turning. Let's not get our brain out of it too. Eating something, even if it's something small to settle your stomach, is always a better route than being hungry.

When testing comes around, our teachers tell us to "get a good night's sleep," "study," "eat a good breakfast," and all these other things, but from one student to another, and I'm sure teachers can agree, take care of yourself. Don't stress yourself out more than you need to. As long as you have tried your best, be proud you did it and don't beat yourself up over it. Depending on the test, there are opportunities to redo it.

If you're still worried or want more information, please feel free to look in the NDA student links and open up the "Test Taking Tips" box. There are so many great tips and tricks for students to prepare themselves for the test.

You've got this, and everyone in this is smarter than we think. You've got this, whatever it may be in life.

This Is Our Time

By Hayden Flores

I know that times are hard, and we may not always want to understand and be compassionate. But I just read a story about Rachel Scott from the Columbine High School shooting. She was willing to give her life for something she believed in. I realize you may be struggling. I know I am. But if we stand together and stay strong nothing, I said NOTHING, can keep us apart. Remember Rachel as you're going through a hard time and remember what she did and more importantly why she did it. Know God is always with you no matter what, and he will never leave your side

The Rhapsody of Spring

By Carli Rettig

In commemoration of the upcoming season, I thought I would share a poem regarding the time of spring and the positivity that comes with it. Thus, I present my poem, “The Rhapsody of Spring:”

The flower blooming from the once cold ground,
Stands as a premonition of her rhapsody.
The mellow air compels her to sing her song,
Filling the world with the pinks of roses,
The oranges of marigolds, the yellows of tulips.

As she flourishes into a vibrant blossom,
The scent of her petals flows like a streaming river,
Waking her sisters from their winter slumber.
The rhapsody of spring reaches the sun,
Encouraging the beautiful tide of spring.
